Support the Construction of a Girl's School in Pakistan!

In Pakistan half of the population of 180 millions is not able to read or write. The government has built many schools over the last years. Due to lack of money many Pakistani schools are insufficiently equipped (no electricity, no water and no furniture) and the teachers get low salaries.

Especially in remote areas many students do not have the chance to visit higher schools after visiting Primary School for 5 years. A lot of parents are not able to pay expensive fees for private schools. So they formed private initiatives and established higher schools.

World Roof Public School

is one of these private schools in a remote valley in North Pakistan. This school which offers higher education especially for girls was badly damaged by heavy floods in summer 2010. To help building a new school the association Bildung für Pakistan (Education for Pakistan) was founded. The association is located in Austria. In April 2011 the construction of a modern school began on a flood-safe property.

4 classrooms were finished by November. The construction of 10 more classrooms started in April 2012. Until now 20.000 Euros donations have been collected. 7000 Euros are still needed to finalize the building.
